COMPLIANCE

Federal law and various state laws require annual training of officials (which can include students) who have a role in the review, receipt, investigation, adjudication, and appeal of certain reports of sexual, interpersonal, and related violence. While specific elements of each required concept are not established in statute/regulations, EVERY PERSON who has a role in receiving reports, investigation, adjudication, hearing, appeal, and advisement for student reports MUST be trained in each and every concept every year. At a minimum, an analysis of these laws, and their regulations and guidance, would require that relevant college officials be trained in:

- Federal and state laws, regulations, and guidance governing the investigation and adjudication of sexual and interpersonal violence, along with relevant campus policies;
- Due Process and Fair Process;
- Working with persons subjected to sexual and interpersonal violence;
- Working with persons accused of sexual and interpersonal violence;
- Working with witnesses and bystanders to sexual and interpersonal violence;
- The types of conduct that would constitute sexual violence, including same-sex and gender non-conforming sexual violence;
- Consent;
- Standard of Review;
- Amnesty when reporting individuals or bystanders disclose violence;
- The importance of accountability for individuals found to have committed misconduct;
- The need for remedial actions for the respondent, complainant, and campus community;
- How to evaluate evidence and credibility;
- Confidentiality;
- Trauma-informed practice;
- Transcript Notations; and
- Cultural awareness regarding how violence and misconduct may impact students differently depending on their backgrounds.

"The Student Conduct Institute has quickly become an indispensable provider of Title IX trainings and resources. The SCI possesses the highest quality presenters, and their SCI Casebook stands out as both a brilliant idea and practical tool."

- Kareem Peat, Title IX Coordinator, Fordham University

"The trainings are higher quality than any of those of independent consultants that I've attended or learned about from my clients. Even if clients receive training from their national membership organizations, I still prefer SCI in addition or instead because it's New York State specific and also NYS forward-looking, with cutting edge information about state case law and legislative updates. The legislative update from SCI staff at last year's SPECTRUM Conference was one of the best presentations I have ever attended in my professional career. NYS colleges and universities are more highly regulated than schools in most other states, so sensitivity to state and local law is important to me as college counsel."

- Andrea I. Stagg, Deputy General Counsel, Barnard College

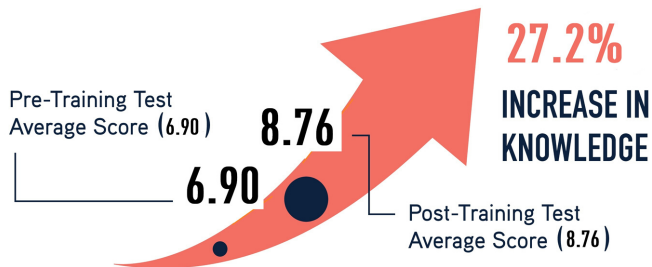

"The SCI has been an incredible resource. We are a small institution, and were able to access the SCI through our CICU membership. We have been able to get our entire hearing board trained which is so important. We are all talking about our process differently. This is important work and it is imperative that we are all prepared. SCI is very attentive to e-mails and questions regarding policy and procedure. Training sessions are very informative. Presenters give you real life experience in cases they have personally been involved in, which helps tremendously."

- Ann Noel, Title IX Coordinator, St. Joseph's College of Nursing

DIRECT LEARNING OUTCOMES

IN KNOWLEDGE ON THE LAW AND PRACTICE OF STUDENT CONDUCT

"The SUNY Student Conduct Institute has been invaluable to our institution with their leadership in addressing cutting-edge Title IX issues. The SCI is truly one stop shopping for me as a Title IX Coordinator. My NYC Title IX colleagues and our investigators have all taken advantage of in-person trainings, and everyone agrees, they have been phenomenal. They are up-to-the-minute, informative, and even entertaining. Now, with their "on-line dashboard," there are easy options for our entire staff to get remote Title IX training on their own schedule. And SUNY will prepare a personal transcript for each participant to keep track of everyone's progress. This work is challenging. Having the Student Conduct Institute there for us, watching trends, and providing training on every conceivable area to train us to be the best investigators we can be is a huge asset to us all."

- Marjory Fisher, Associate Vice President, Title IX Coordinator, Columbia University
